Family Preservation/Alternative Response

SHIELDS Compton Family Preservation Network provides high-risk DCFS and Probation referred families with intensive case management, home visits, and other services to reduce the risk of abuse and out-of-home placements. In addition, the Alternative Response Program is offered to DCFS referred low-risk families in order to help them stay together by strengthening families and promoting a safe and nurturing environment.

SHIELDS Compton Family Preservation Network works with the Department of Children and Family Services' (DCFS) Compton Office to offer a continuum of care to DCFS and Probation families who are experiencing family functioning challenges related to child abuse, neglect, and/or exploitation. The program provides comprehensive, family-focused and community based services that ensure the physical, emotional, social, and educational development of children in a safe and nurturing environment necessary for positive outcomes including home outreach counseling, emergency housing, drug testing and child focus activities. Family participation, flexibility, availability and accessibility of services provide families with a supportive framework to develop to their maximum potential and minimize the risk of child abuse and neglect and out-of-home placement.

SHIELDS Compton Family Preservation Network (CFPN) has been providing family preservation services to families in Compton and the surrounding areas since January, 1992, as one of the original nine family preservation programs in Los Angeles County. Since implementation, Compton Family Preservation Network has provided collaborative, community-based family preservation services to high-risk families referred by the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS). The goals of the CFPN are: (1) Safety - Children shall remain free from abuse and neglect; (2) Permanency - Children shall achieve permanency through reunification, adoption, and guardianship; and (3) Well-Being - Children shall improve their level of functioning in the areas of physical, emotional, social, education, cultural and spiritual development.

CFPN works closely with the Compton Office of the Department of Children and Family Services to provide high-risk DCFS and Probation referred families with intensive case management, home visits, and other services to reduce the risk of abuse and out-of-home placements. In addition, the Alternative Response Program is offered to DCFS referred low-risk families in order to help them stay together by strengthening families and promoting a safe and nurturing environment. Services are provided using a comprehensive, family strength-based approach and are offered in the home, community, and/or center in both English and Spanish, to ensure equal availability of services to all families accessing the program.

Based on our annual evaluation reports, approximately 90% of all families served have been successful in accomplishing their established goals and unification or reunification. The success of the Compton Family Preservation Network has been based upon the collaborative efforts of the Network members and Department representatives that have continued to meet and work together to resolve concerns, develop resources, and improve upon service delivery. Additionally, the Compton Family Preservation Network initiated the co-location model for the provision of services. From the beginning, all staff from the lead and member agencies have been co-located at the Compton Family Preservation site, including the out-stationing of our mental health services.

- SHIELDS helped to design Family Preservation, developed policies and procedures for Los Angeles, and was a primary partner with the Department to implement the program throughout the Country.
